About Gold and Money
What Happens to the Dollar?

What Will Europe Say?
Pity the Poor Best Mind

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Schering, Pa., Jan. 16.—There is big news today about the President and gold, and men with money that will weep, thinking their dollars have lost value, and men without money that will smile, hoping for more plentiful dollars, and foreign nations that will wonder, and ask, "What NEXT from America?"

Read it all carefully, think hard and do not stop thinking until you understand it clearly. It is important to you, to the whole world, to depression and to the history of money.

All the gold in the country is Uncle Sam's. Individuals can have none of it, and as they dig it from the earth they must sell it to their government, at such prices as it chooses to fix.

If one farmer in the United States owned all the pigs, let us say 100,000,000 of them, and if they were worth $4 each, the farmer-owner would be worth four hundred million dollars. If he had power suddenly to make the pigs worth $1 each, he would be worth eight hundred million dollars.

Uncle Sam owns all the gold, four and five billion dollars worth at the old price. When he ordered all citizens to deliver their gold to him it was worth a little more than $20 an ounce. He raised the price above $34 an ounce, increasing the dollar value of his gold hoard in proportion. If he raises the price by act of Congress or presidential fiat, to $40 an ounce the value of his original gold hoard becomes worth twice as many dollars.

What good does that do him? It enables him to pay off twice as many dollars in debt. He can, if he chooses, go back to the gold standard and name twice as many "gold dollars" as he could have done with gold at $20 an ounce. Will they really be gold dollars? Certainly, for gold has no real value except that given it by law or custom. And dollars have no real value, either. It depends on what they will buy. Ask your friend who thinks he "knows all about money," to explain it to you.

The Germans, after the war, got rid of their internal national debt by making their money worthless. The French had to do the same thing. The value of the French franc, leaving the value of monetary gold unchanged. The British went off the gold standard, and did their best to keep the pound from sinking too far, while making sterling debt payments easier. Uncle Sam shows them something new. "I double the value," he says, "and I'm back on a liquid gold basis." In finance he is what one old Irish money lender would have called "a puzzle the world."

Will the rest of the world officially accept the Roosevelt gold price? Possibly. But it is more than any one else. We might buy nearly all of it and the man who has it can use it as he likes. The next to Uncle Sam, France has most gold, then Britain. The British have twice as valuable worth gold, as the United States, and as the value of the dollar would suit the owner.

Would you say, "Then Heaven forbid twelve million dollars of human beings that have no gold, or silver?" Yes, we should say that. But if you say, "Then Heaven forbid twelve million dollars of human beings that have no gold, or silver, might, however, just what?"

In your dollar worth just what it was when Hoover was President? Not necessarily. If we say so can double that dollar value of gold, the dollar will not suffer. Everything else has more than doubled in value since Washington was President. Steel, labor, land, why should doubling gold values upset everything? Of course, if we should double the value again, too soon, that might seriously upset some of our best minds. The reason by now they are probably upset beyond further thought. The "gold standard" was removed on March 4, last, had forty million dollars worth to himself. "I own two million ounces of gold." Now he owns only one million ounces. He has lost half his gold. If the million ounces are worth forty million dollars, he has lost half his money.

Money, you will admit, is a deep subject, making Einstein's theory look like simple division. Higher priced gold will please the British, for there is the gold producing for them. There is the gold producing for them. Russia also will like the higher gold price. Her gold production is light, and Russian engineers are constantly increasing it. She needs dollars for purchases.

Blow Knocks Him to Door of Death

New Attacks

By FRANK C. WALDEORF

Washington, Jan. 16.—The Washington Herald today publishes for the first time a comprehensive and exclusive translation of the inflammatory pamphlet, "A Narrative of the Japanese United States Future War," 1250 copies of which were seized December 14 in Honolulu, by U. S. customs officers.

This treatise, thickly disguised as a novel, was written by a retired Japanese naval officer and outlines methods to be employed in waging and winning a war with the United States.

It carries the unqualified endorsement of Admiral Kanji Kato, counselor of military affairs, and of Vice-Admiral Nomura Sotomatsu, chief of naval operations of Japan, who only a few days ago in Tokyo declared war with the United States is inevitable.

Veritable handbooks of sedition and suggestion of ways and means to commit sabotage in this country and its possessions, the book is being closely held, as the Herald has obtained, there are not known to be any others outside of official sources here.

Officials who have read these pamphlets say it is a masterpiece of its kind, and in the semi-official circles of its suggestions.

Since the contents of the so-called "dream novel" became known, they have been made privately by the State Department to the Japanese foreign office. It is feared that the Japanese government has shrugged their shoulders, so to speak, and pointed out the author of the book is not an active naval officer, but a retired one.

Furthermore, they pointed out, it is merely a "dream novel," as the author explains, and no officers of the navy would think of doing what it suggests.

Hull to Speed Trade Pacts With American Republics

R. S. Santa Barbara, at Sea, Jan. 16 (AP)—Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, said today he expected to set in motion, immediately upon his return to Washington, the machinery for the negotiation of reciprocal trade treaties with all American republics. Secretary Hull also disclosed that the formula for the long pending and disturbing situation in Haiti includes withdrawal of United States treaty officials as soon as Haiti pays debts amounting to $12,000,000 or $12,000,000 due the United States. Hull said that in addition to the steps toward reciprocal trade pacts which already have been taken with Argentina, Brazil and Cuba, he plans to see a quick commercial linking of the United States with the other nations of the American continent through the embassy and legations in their capitals. He said conversations with Chile have already begun and are progressing satisfactorily. Negotiations with half a dozen others are expected to begin soon. He held high hopes that the commercial link between all the republics would be accomplished this year.

BURKE PUT IN LOOTED CAGE

Daniel T. Burke, former Boston policeman on trial in Superior Court for the theft of $22,941 from a police station post office, was identified today as a man seen in the cage on the day of the two-minute theft, Sept. 16, 1932. The identification was made by William H. Briggs, traveling auditor for the Boston Terminal Co. and railroad agent of Boston, and Briggs declared that Burke, on sighting him, fled with a companion whose face Briggs could not see. Briggs said he arrived at the ticket offices that morning and went upstairs to the courtroom. On his way back to the offices, he said, he met Thomas McDonald, ticket seller and cashier, who was going up the circular staircase. When Briggs arrived back at the offices he saw two men, he said, one inside McDonald's cage with his hand on the door knob and the other just outside. "The man inside and I looked at each other and he went out," said Briggs. Q. (By Asst. Dist. Atty. Gillen) Who was that man? "This gentleman here (pointing to Burke). Q. You mean the defendant? A. SPENCER BACKS DEPOSIT PLAN

A system of guaranteeing savings deposits recommended by the special commission which studied the entire banking structure of the state was endorsed by Carl M. Spencer, president of the Savings Bank Association of Massachusetts, at a hearing today in the State House. It was then brought out that cooperative banks according to a poll taken, show 140 in favor, 32 against, 20 are uncertain or neutral. Asst. Atty-Gen. George Lourie, speaking for Atty-Gen. Joseph E. Warner, read portions of his chief's recommendation to the Legislature in which was incorporated the suggestion that a state system of deposit insurance be instituted by the Mutual Savings Control Fund, Inc. for the protection of savings bank depositors.

STRIKERS' JURY TRIALS ASKED

An echo of the recent Brockton shoe strike was heard at a hearing today before the legislative committee on judiciary when Frank A. Goodwin, counsel for the workers, sponsored a bill to prohibit imposition of a fine or imprisonment for contempt of court in labor disputes without trial by jury. Goodwin linked the name of Joseph W. Bartlett, head of the CWA administration, with the Douglas Shoe Co. of Brockton. There was no trouble until the Douglas company hired strike-breakers and the state police came in, he said. Court orders, he said, were then secured restraining the strikers from annoying or accosting workers. "It's an outrage to allow any judge to put a man in jail in a case like this without a trial by jury," he declared.

Examining the Gambler's Emotions

Well, I have heard the enlisted men in France woo the little jane clubs with freckles on their sides and plead with a terrified ness that was touching to hear, please to be nice to papa, promising to live virtuous lives and eschew rum if only the dice will spin the needed point. It was a convincing show of affection for when the dice sometimes did make the point and the lads would struggle the little cubes to their bosoms, nursing them in a transport of delight and whispering sweetest words. Only when a little later the darling dice missed and the soldier's stake was scooped up by rival hands, he would sometimes grab up the squares and fling them through the window. This of course has nothing to do with horse and dog racing, except as it illustrates the primitive emotions that govern all money gambles.

And the better people too, some of whom are mentioned as good parents of the state belling hsk, are hardly any more immune to being scorched by their own inward fire. Because a few winters ago I stood under the crystal lights and gilded ceiling of the Ca- san at Cannes and watched a glittering horshoe of folk, in evening dress, playing the little white pang-pung ball that scatters around the inside of a parti-colored washbasin until it dropped into a numbered slot and the voice of the croupier would dron, "Monsieur vingt-sept, rouge!" while he drank in some of the chips. I deliberated others across the room, and I saw how they were grouped, and I saw how they looked with their souls in their eyes, nibbling it up with death, with dew on its forehead, and I recall how, suddenly, a beautiful woman in lavender attire, had gulped a little sob and tere her hairkerchief in shreds as she turned away. But that too, except as it shows a human profile, has nothing to do with horses or dogs.

Racing Dogs Rate Low in Intelligence

I cannot honestly say that I feel sorry for the stinky weasels, dogs, with their bodkin bellies and toothpick legs, because in the true sense of the word they are less dogs than canine robots, with a low intelligence that does not know the difference between wooden rabbit with a light bulb for a tail and the real thing of flesh and blood. Because I have a little, flop eared mutt at home who would chase one of these frauds only a couple of leaps before your weasel dog will go on, night after night, shagging these wooden bunnies till their gullets drop out, and if you try to get them in the paddock they will shear off your hand at the wrist in one slashing bite. So, if I feel any compassion it is that man has been allowed to breed out all the divine qualities of a fuzzy friend with a flannel tongue, and leave only a primitive husk.

I do not wish to impose a special morality on anyone, because I like to jiggle the little square cubes and watch the ping-pong ball spin in the parti-colored washbowl. If I have a message it is simple that, while the horse and dog are supposed to be man's best friend, man is not always their best friend and, for the sake of a dollar, will jab frisky juices into their systems, scrub their tongues with heroine and squeeze chewing gum between their toes. And in simple sight a horse is merely a splendid work of God in his manner, to be clapped lovingly on the neck and fed red apples, and a dog will always stay just a fuzzy friend with a flannel tongue.

WOULD DROP PRO TOUR

WANTS TO CONQUER AS AMATEUR

By Walter Riley

"Let the U. S. L. T. A. pass favorable action on its February meeting at Chicago on the proposed to conduct a national open tennis tournament in New York this summer and see quick back Bill Tilden and myself will be to grasp the opportunity to compete," stated Ellsworth Vines, "my national amateur champion, as he accepted the plan for a well earned and brilliant professional victory over Tilden before a crowd of almost 15,000 at Boston Garden.

"My only regret in departing amateur tennis," he added, "is that I am unable under present conditions to gain revenge on the fellow who beat me in 1925."

"I speak particularly of Frank Shields who handed me a 10-8 at Newport and Bryan Great who knocked me out of the 1926 Wimbledon, beating them in an open event, I knew the tables would be reversed.

"I know that I can speak for Tilden in regard to the national open and the Richards, Barnes, Goddard and the others, recently turned professionals. I can assure you, that nothing would deter us from being among the contestants.

"We will gladly alter our previous plan, if necessary, and will be more than willing to meet the U. S. L. T. A. officials to handle the event as they see fit. Furthermore, Tilden and I will co-operate in any way we can to insure its success."

LIST FIRST 10

Further proof that the professional field greatly superior to the amateur and would like to prove is gleaned from the program of the Tilden-Vines affair.

Under a caption "Why not an open tournament?" it was stated which group would win? a list of 10 pro and 10 amateurs is therein included.

Lined in order the amateurs are Jack Crawford, Fred Perry, J. W. "Bunny" Austin, Frank Brierley, John Clifford, Bill Johnston, George Cram, Lester Binks, Jiro St. John, and R. L. Williams.

The pros are Tilden, Elsie Nusslein, Vines, Henri Cochet, Karl K. K. St. John, Vincent, R. L. Williams, Martin Place, Robert Hammett, and Roman Nijboer.

Naturally, Vines was overjoyed in history over Tilden's return after losing the first two sets and making his determined and courageous comeback found him stronger than ever over a fast rising opponent.

He took the final three sets in convincing manner.

The scores were 12-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

The series is now even at two all. "Big Bill" having won at New York and Philadelphia in the first pair at Washington and St. Louis.

Today, the troupe moves on to Providence for the fifth match of the series tonight.

Vines confidently remarked that here on he felt he had a better chance to win his share of the match.

HELEN JONES BACK
Vines' superb tennis, masterful striking and terrific service which after time and practice, is being by his talented rival, must have opened up the eyes of the Boston Wills Moody will return to the game this summer.

"Mrs. Moody is a great woman," he stated, "and I look for her brilliant future in the championship circuit and I can tell you that if she is fit one more that she will be better than ever and will beat any woman now playing the game. She is the best woman player in the world without exception."

COOK-BOOS

By TED COOK

According to Senator Dickerson, of Iowa, "This government has gotten into a lot of monkey business." Absolutely. And it was led into a lot of it by none other than Mister Pecora.

YOUTH! YOUTH!

Deputy Sheriff Harry Buchanan arrested Jas. M. Koonce last night on the charge of throwing rocks thru the window of the Hanick filling station at the east edge of town. His father, James Koonce, was arrested a short time ago on the charge of burglary and larceny at the same station. Young Koonce, we understand, threw the rocks in order to get even and desired to go to jail with his father.

Review—Sell your hammer and buy a chisel.

Boys Genevieve, the hidden cynic: "And for every man supporting a nobis cause, there's probably two being supported by a nobis cause."

Where do they get that "prob-ably" stuff?

Q. AND A. DEPARTMENT

Dear A. B.: I am about to be married for the third time, presently, dear, sympathetic Aunt Bella, and since I feel that this is finally true love I would like to wear the traditional white with a veil and all that sort of thing. But my friends tell me this is not elegant. Do you think it would be all right, kiddo? Excited.

Ans.—Sure. All Auntie B. asks is that you also wear liking boots. A. ("Whipping Hand") Bella.

Smiles from Jack Zied: Uncalled for as a two-pants suit in a bath shop.

STAND ASIDE FOR THE ENGINEERS

"Having developed the necessary technique for almost unlimited production of wealth, the engineer can no longer stand aside while financiers and politicians so tragically handle the profits of his distribution." Dean A. A. Potter, Purdue University School of Engineering.

Hitch your belt up, brother—and dry those bitter tears—We'll soon be saved from chaos by the almighty engineer!

They'll eat the politicians, they'll eat the financiers And save us from confusion with their gadgets, cogs and gears.

It's all so very simple and it's all so very slick. If sliding rules and calipers will only turn the trick!

Afterthought—We have an slight missing, we have a frail, faint team—Wanna Mister Healer, lady, a technical engineer!

FAMOUS LAST WORDS The trouble with you, lady, in your world is full of artificiality.

We, in America, however, have tackled the problem in a different way.
